Creative Food Co.

■ The Daily Creative Food Co. – read all about it! It’s the newest café craze on Biscayne Boulevard b/w 19th & 20th street in the Cite Condominium Bldg where, indoors or out, you can take in a vibe that is all New York City right in the heart of downtown Miami. Owner Adam Meltzer, a New York native, got his inspiration for The Daily from the same kinds of café/coffeehouses scattered around the Big Apple, “the kinds of places where you can pick up your coffee, scrambled egg w/bacon and cheese sandwich, and the newspaper – daily.” And here it is: a casually upscale café where you can custom order your coffee, bagel, salad, or sandwich, or choose from their extensive menu of signature favorites. The Daily revolves around a journalistic theme: from the classic paperboy logo outside to the newspaper-named salads and sandwiches, this is the only place in Miami where you can read The Miami Herald while eating the Wall Street Smoked Salmon Sandwich. Or maybe The New York Post Asian Chicken Wrap has more to offer than just today’s news: try grilled chicken with carrots, cucumbers, and red onions w/romaine lettuce and a spicy Thai peanut sauce in a spinach wrap. It’s these and other “publication” sandwiches and paninis that create “instant regulars” with just one bite. Everything is made with the freshest ingredients; the fries are hand-cut, and even the dressings are made fresh every day. Fresh food, healthy choices, and a vibrant atmosphere bring in an interesting array of people every day: from the afternoon matinee crowd to college students to rush hour sidesteppers, anyone can find a coffee drink suited to their tastes while sitting back and taking in the new-meets-old atmosphere as the day goes by. And just for convenience’s sake, there’s even a free parking garage right behind the building for The Daily’s esteemed diners. Described as “a little oasis amongst a hoard of fast food,” there’s a vibe at The Daily that cannot be replicated at any other franchised café. Perhaps it’s the cheery, old-fashioned, giant comic strip on the wall, or the 25,000 song playlist showcasing the best music – new and old – that the world has known. Perhaps it’s the intellectual atmosphere that connects people’s opinions and interests to others’, or that connects them all to free Wi-Fi to keep productivity moving along. Whatever it is, The Daily Creative Food Co. is welcoming and intent on serving you a delicious breakfast, lunch, or snack with that cup of coffee and newspaper. The Daily will be expanding soon to include dinner service as well. And while this fantastic menu and service is old news, it’s still, and will continue to be, good news. The Daily is destined to become a Miami classic!
